Irrigating by Sun Power.

Dreams of utilizing the sun's rays instead of through the medium of coal, have been realized at last. That might be termed a triumph is a very and extremely clever motor, operated by the heat of the sun, and used to pump water at the ostrich farm in Pasadena, Cal. It was successfully installed there last November, and at that time its operations have been witnessed by many thousands of visitors.

According to mathematical deduction, it is shown that the heat now wanted in a single acre is capable of generating 10,000-horse-power. Inspired by this knowledge, the machine was constructed for the sun's energy, though, must be confessed, with very little success. They lived when the time was ripe. The first successful effort made eight years ago, and inventors and engineers since then have continued to perfect the device until, at this time, it has a record for evaporating pounds of water per hour, under 150 inches of steam pressure, giving an efficiency of 11-horse-power (indicated) per square foot.

Steam test pressure developed, 210 inches, and water pumped, 1440 gallons per minute, equal to a flow of 155 inches, the lift being equivalent to 120 feet.

California such a power means the irrigation of 200 acres of alfalfa or 300 acres of oranges or 500 acres of peaches, apricots or prunes. The machine is small and well proportioned, and the motor gathering in the sunshine concentrates its rays on a conical-shaped mirror, which measures 33 feet at the base and 15 feet at the bottom. The reflector is lined with 1788 small glass mirrors silvered on the back, and is pivoted on the sun's rays to the axis of the engine.

The engine is automatically lubricated, and by a special device the sunlight is made to impinge on the surface of the mirror, and the latter becomes empty, and explosion is impossible. The engine weighs less than 8000 lbs. complete; the repairs are very simple, and it is about as automatic as a windmill.

The weight is carried on roller bearings and is accomplished by means of a port, and a common clock governs daily motion. The whole plant is left practically to itself for days, weeks at a time; the sun is the power, and largely the engineer. All that is needed when steam is desired is to bring the reflector into focus; when it is done it is possible to develop from 1 to 2000-horse-power.

Scientists freely predict that irrigation by sun power is destined for production throughout the arid West never practicable. — Philadelphia Record.

CONVICT FINDS WIFE DIVORCED Loses Family by Term in Prison.

Sad Return for Dishonest Clerk After Four Years in Sing Sing.

Woman He Loved and Longed for Wouldn't Even Let Him See Their Children.

NEW YORK, April 26.—Although ordinary eyes saw only plain neatness in the clothing of Joseph A. Conlin, a woman beheld in it, in fancy, the striped garb of a convict. "Clean shaven" would have been the only comment of strangers upon his face, but to the woman that face bore the prison pallor.

Once they had been husband and wife, but when the prison gates shut him from her view almost four years ago, she looked upon him as one dead, and after that her one thought was to blot him out of the lives of their children.

But he, criminal as he was—a mean betrayer of trust, for he had robbed the mails when employed by the Government—still had a heart full of love for his two little girls. Memory of them lightened the gloom of the cell in Sing Sing, to which he was sent four years ago. The belief that they would welcome him when he got his freedom was his only solace later when his poor health caused his transfer to a Georgia prison.

It was because his heart ached to be with them once more that he became the most exemplary of convicts; and when, three weeks ago, he was released, before his time, he hurried back to this city, firm in the belief his wife would forgive him, and he would be able to see his children.

And—and my girls," asked Conlin, "bearing to hear that poverty had caused the mother to place them in an institution."

They were with her when I heard of them," she said; the neighbor, then, "but don't ask for Mrs. Conlin."

"Why not?"

"Didn't you hear? Oh, I suppose not, somebody else'll tell you if I don't. She got a divorce from you and married herself by her maiden name, Jennie O'Reilly."

To the released convict that news came with crushing force. His wife no longer his wife, but must needs his children no more were his. He hastened to her mother's house. Admittance was denied him; he waited in the street for the woman who had once borne him a son. Her first start of amazement at seeing him was followed by wrath. Why should he bother her? His wife had married another man—yes, a good, honest man—and why should this one come back here to her life now?

He pleaded to be permitted to see his children; he told of the long days and nights in prison, when only the hope of seeing his wife and his children kept him sane; he told of the hardships he had undergone; but the one-time wife was not moved by his pleas. The girls happily had forgotten him, and he was a stranger to them. The whole terrible truth would be sure to be recalled to their memories. So she comforted him never to come near the house.

Determined to see them.

A man filled with the spirit of sublime self-sacrifice might have crept away, never to return, but Conlin was just a plain man, and he loved his children. Instead of obeying his wife, he kept lingering about the house, day after day, hoping for a glimpse of the girls. The upshot of it all was the wife had him arrested for annoying her, and yesterday the pair stood in the Yorkville court. Happily for the children's peace of mind, their presence was not required.

"I want this man kept away from me," the woman said to Magistrate Crane. "I love her," said Conlin, sadly, "and I love my little girls. It was because I wanted to see them I followed her. Many a long night in my cell I found cheer in the prospect of release, when I should have atoned for the past, and when once more I should be permitted to join my family and to have the arms of my little girls around my neck. It was this hope that gave me strength, and it was this hope that made me find my wife divorced from me and that I could not see my babies."

"Your wife has the legal custody of the children," said the magistrate, "and you have no right to molest her. You must not interfere with her in any manner. Bill it's hard to bear a father from his children."

"He's a convict, your Honor," broke in the former wife.

"Will you not let him see the children?" asked the Magistrate, with pity in his tone.

"Not unless you order it."

"I cannot order that, of course, but I should allow the father that pleasure. It is no hardship to you and would give him great joy."

"My wife knows what I think of my children," said Conlin, with tears in his eyes.

"I'm not your wife!" she cried. "Don't you dare call me your wife!" returned Conlin, brokenly.

Magistrate Crane finally persuaded her to let Conlin visit his children. The next day in the home of his sister a glad light came into the mother's eyes at that. He started to thank the Magistrate, but was choked with the first utterance and tottered out of court. The wife—that had been followed to take the news to the children that were hers, not his.

NEW RAILWAY TO ISSUE BONDS

Salt Lake Southern Will Raise $2,000,000 to Build Electric Line.

Papers have been filed in the County Recorder's office showing that the Salt Lake Southern Railway company, now building an electric line from this city to Sandy via Murray, has prepared to issue bonds for $2,000,000 to secure money with which to continue with the work. It was decided to mortgage the holdings of the company at a meeting of the stockholders in Chicago on January 28th.

The bonds are of the denomination of $1000, and are first mortgage, gold coupons, bearing interest of 5 per cent. The issue bears date of February 1, 1904, and are due February 1, 1939. The bonds are redeemable any time after February 1, 1909. The bond issue is made through the Knickerbocker Trust company of New York, to which company the railway company has executed a trust deed for all its property in this State, consisting of franchises, mineral locations and the lines and buildings of the company to be built.

Another instrument filed yesterday in the office of the Recorder shows that the Salt Lake Southern Railway company has purchased, for a consideration of $1,400,000, fifteen lots and places claims, together with the right to purchase extensive lands from the State Board of Land Commissioners and County Commissioners from the Western Development & Construction company.

This company, which was incorporated under the name of the Salt Lake Suburban Railway company, filed an amendment to its articles on Monday, wherein the name was changed to the Salt Lake Southern Railway company, and the capital stock was increased from $500,000 to $2,000,000.

NO CHANGES ARE MADE IN PORTLAND

PORTLAND, Ore., April 26.—That A. L. Craig will remain in Portland as general passenger agent of the O. R. & N., with supervision over the passenger traffic of the Southern Pacific north of Ashland, and that there will be no changes in official titles of the various heads of the traffic departments at the present time are some of the facts that have been established, following the return to Portland of Traffic Director Stubbs and Assistant Traffic Director E. O. McCormick of the Harriman system.

These two traffic officials arrived in Portland this morning on the Southern Pacific overland No. 36. Alfred Holman of the Sacramento, a well-known newspaper man was their guest on the car, and with Private Secretary Dutcher completed the personnel party.

Authoritative statement is made that General Passenger Agent Craig will remain in Portland, and that there was no authentic foundation for the reports published that he would go to San Francisco.

BEST SPRING MEDICINE.

Our Leading Druggists, Druehl & Franken, Out of Their Vast Stock and Extensive Knowledge of Medicines Recommend Vinol as the Best.

"At this season of the year," said Mr. Druehl of the firm of Druehl & Franken the other evening, "there isn't a man, woman or child in Salt Lake City, who does not need a medicine to purify and enrich the blood, to induce an appetite, to promote digestion and create strength, and we are safe in saying we have never sold anything but our store equal to Vinol for this purpose."

This new way of administering the vital principles of cod liver oil has wrought a wonderful change in the field of medicine. There is no need to take greasy oil, emulsions or poisonous drugs to purify and enrich the blood and create health and strength, for we guarantee that pure, simple and delicious preparation, Vinol, will do it, or your money will be returned.

Mrs. Rose Lavigne of Burlington, Vt., writes: "Vinol is the best spring medicine I have ever used; it creates an appetite, purifies the blood and takes away all feeling of lassitude. My work, which seemed a burden before taking Vinol, is now a pleasure."

Mr. W. J. Stewart of Chelsea, Mass., writes: "I was all run down and in a debilitated condition. Vinol quickly built me up and brought back health and strength."

Mr. J. B. Kener, Augusta, Ga., writes: "When one gets all run down, loses appetite, feels listless, worn out and nervous, I have found nothing so good as Vinol to restore strength and health."

Said Mr. Druehl: "I could go on quoting from hundreds of such letters, and I wish I could persuade every person in Salt Lake City to try Vinol this spring. It is our guarantee to return money if you are not benefited." Druehl, Franken and Smith Drug Co., Druggists.

DRUG STORE FLAVORING EXTRACTS.

There is so much difference in the flavoring extracts that you get here, and the common kind, that the success or failure of a dessert, a cake or an ice cream may depend on which you use, ours or the every-day sort. A bottle of our Extract of Vanilla is one of the flavors that will tell the story. Costs you no more than the cheap kind.
